

Born Ian Moxley, I:nigma was born and raised in Cincinnati, Ohio. Growing up, I:nigma was always drawn to music, from the stories they told to the beat of the music, I:nigma always felt connected to the music as a way he could express himself. His influence from music came from his family and the music he listened to growing up. The music he listened to growing up ranged from Motown, Whitney Houston, Rick James to Phil Collins and everyone in between. I:nigma always felt he could create and perform music well and create better beats and stories in his music. This was evident as he performed in talent shows and competitions growing up, often doing covers and putting his own spin to the original music. In 1998, I:nigma began listening to instrumentals of other music and wrote notebooks worth of lyrics to them. In 2002, I:nigma began writing and recording his own music. In the past decade, through ups and downs, he has recorded 4 albums and performed countless shows which leads us to the future...
